

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

FOREWORD

THIS volume, exclusive of the Supplement, constitutes the Proceedings of the Annual Meeting of the Academy held on May 13 and 14, 1921.

One of the problems constantly confronting the officers of the Academy is to select for the Annual Meeting a subject which will be in the foreground of public attention at the time the sessions are held. The Academy was particularly fortunate in the selection of the topic for the Annual Meeting held in May last, and in placing this volume in the hands of our members. The Editors, as well as the Officers, feel that the Academy has made a real contribution to the enlightenment of public opinion.

The Officers of the Academy desire to take this opportunity again to thank those who participated in the sessions of the Annual Meeting, as well as to express their appreciation to the delegates from all sections of the country who attended the sessions.

L. S. ROWE,
President